Attorney General Morrisey,

It is with great pleasure that the Marshall University School of Pharmacy writes this letter. We are deeply involved in combating the opioid epidemic all over West Virginia and especially in the Huntington area which has been one of the hardest hit across the country in terms of opioid overdose death rate. As our school is located in this area, we feel it is our duty to our community and all of WV to join in this fight.

The fight is a long uphill battle that is going to require all West Virginians to band together to create a better tomorrow. Many weapons will be needed in this war, and all are certainly welcome. One thing that has long been neglected are best practices for opioid users across our state.

The Best Practices put forth by the Attorney General's Office and evaluated by many stakeholders are a strong commitment to ensuring West Virginians have the tools we need to keep fighting. We owe the Attorney General's Office a great deal of gratitude for organizing, perpetuating, and completing such a task. It has not been a simple project, and it has required the hard work, dedication, and time of many professionals who realize what it is going to take to push the dream forward of an opioid abuse free (or at least minimized) West Virginia.

Our Thank You to the Attorney General's Office for helping all of West Virginia. The Marshall University School of Pharmacy is proud to support the Attorney General's Office's Best Practices for Opioid Users.

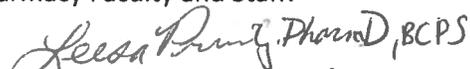

Thank You again for leading this effort to help all West Virginians,

Charles Babcock, PharmD, CDE, BCACP
